THE LIGHT OF EDUCATION

EDUCATION IS THE HOPE OF THE FUTURE. THE FATE OF THIS BLEEDING WAR TORN WORLD LIES IN THE HANDS OF TODAY'S YOUTH. THIS GENERATION MUST BE EDUCATED TO BE WISE AND TOLERANT IN WORLD AS WELL AS IN DOMESTIC AFFAIRS. IT IS UP TO THE YOUNG PEOPLE OF THE WESTERN HEMISPHERE, COMPARATIVELY UNTOUCHED BY THE HORRORS OF WAR, UNINFLUENCED BY SADISM AND HATREDS, TO BUILD A BETTER, A BROTHERLY WORLD COMMUNITY. PEACE WILL NEVER BE POSSIBLE WITHOUT THE RIGHT KIND OF EDUCATION.

GLORIA PASQUINI

Dr. William C. Hill

For thirty-five years the Classical High School has been in the hands of a great school man. And now that he is, almost unbelievably, leaving us, we are beginning to realize what an integral part of the character, the achievement, and the prestige of this school he has been. All the things of which we have come to be most proud — our school's reputation for scholarship, our Dartmouth plaque, our Harvard trophy, our Junior College, distinguished for the record of its students, the magnificent achievement of our music department — all these things we know full well could never have been achieved without the leadership of Dr. Hill.

That leadership has received admiring recognition far beyond the limits of the Classical High School and the city of Springfield. In 1923 Harvard University, in awarding him an honorary degree of Master of Arts spoke of him as an "eminent member of the long and honorable line of great schoolmasters, whose school at Springfield alone among public schools has won, and thrice won the trophy for boys best prepared for Harvard." In 1933 Mount Holyoke College in conferring on him the degree of Doctor of Letters (Litt. D) referred to the "wise educator, whose influence in furthering the cooperation and mutual understanding of school and college has extended far beyond community and state; friend and co-worker with Mount Holyoke College, whose word in our estimation is as good as his bond." And in 1943 President King of Amherst College bestowed another degree of L.H.D. (Doctor of Humane Letters) on Dr. Hill, "graduate of Brown University; near neighbor in this valley; prominent leader in secondary education; for thirty-three years principal of the Classical High School of Springfield. Amherst College, in common with her sister colleges in New England, knows at first hand the high quality of your performance. And as a graduate of your school of an earlier era, I take pride in my privilege in welcoming you into the Amherst fellowship."

These are but part of the richly merited honors that have in recent years come thick and fast to Dr. Hill. Brown University has presented him with a degree of M.A. He has been a recognized leader in the Association of New England Colleges and Secondary Schools. He has long been active in and has served as the head of the distinguished Headmasters' Society. He is known among the leading educators of the East as a profound and inspiring speaker on educational topics. And this year, on the fiftieth anniversary of his teaching career, prominent schoolmen, headmasters, deans, and college presidents, have been eager to pay him tribute in a volume of eloquent personal testimonials.

Truly Classical High School and the city of Springfield have been privileged in his leadership. He has made our school a place where first things come first, where teachers have been inspired to teach and pupils have been proud to learn, where character and scholarship and friendly human relationships go hand in hand. He has learned as an educator, to face and provide for the fact that students and teachers vary in their abilities, but at the same time he has striven to keep alive in each, according to his capacity, the flame of aspiration. Here, indeed, has been a great educator. When comes there such another?

THE PHI BETA KAPPA TROPHY

THE DARTMOUTH PLAQUE

The Phi Beta Kappa trophy was awarded from 1915 to 1924 inclusive to the school whose delegation to Harvard made the highest record in the entrance examinations. Classical High School won the trophy permanently by winning it four times during the ten years, more times than any other school. Our school was the only public school to win the trophy. The picture of the Dartmouth plaque speaks for itself.

In Memoriam

To the boys of Classical who have given their lives for their country, we solemnly pledge that we will not forget. We will pray now and always, that we may so live our lives as to be in some small measure worthy of their sacrifice.

THE RECORDER—OLD AND NEW

For many years the production of a publication called the Recorder has been an activity of the English department. A year before Springfield's famous blizzard of '88, the first Recorder appeared. A four page sheet which opened into eight pages about half the size of today's paper, it had fine print, but no cuts, headlines or ads. In the middle 1890's a magazine format was introduced. Through the years a magazine form, published about once a month, was continued. In 1915, due in large part to the efforts of Leland Smith and Schuyler Van Sickle, then students at Classical, a weekly paper called the Central News was issued. A larger paper, The Central Recorder, followed in 1923. In the 1930's this became more of a newspaper in style. Multilith copies appeared frequently from 1941 until 1943 when the present paper began to be printed.

Today's Recorder is a far cry from the first copy of nearly sixty years ago. Clear type, five columns instead of three, larger size, including six pages, modeled upon modern newspapers, it is the organ through which the students reflect their activities, express their opinions, and employ their creative talents in writing and illustrating.

THE DRAMA CLASS

The pictures above are of the drama class and the eight plays it has presented this year. The drama class provides an outlet for students who wish to act, direct and produce plays. Students improve their speech and poise through varied activities including pantomime, short skits, one-act plays and one long play. Practice in directing productions is also afforded, and opportunities for creative writing and cooperative endeavor are many. Activities are worked out in the classroom and rehearsed on the assembly hall stage. The students in the drama class are from left to right: Front row: Robin Ladd, Paul Mhot, Cliff Helgesson, Nary Jean Layman, Robin Cordner, Anita Barrows, William Landen, Joan Bull, Fred Pease, Second row: Lorraine Cowles, Nary Ryan, Doris Avery, Adele Foster, Arthur Frankl, Charlotte Barry, Mary Alice Fitzgerald, Marilyn Rame, Back row: Helen Galfrey, Marilyn Smith, Richard McNaughton, Sally Stocker, Stanley Weinstock, Bette Landen, Sylvia Rubin.

A SCENE FROM "A HOWLING SUCCESS"

This year's annual play, "A Howling Success", was given in the Technical High School auditorium on April 14 with a cast of 12 chosen from the drama class and "The Thespians". The comedy which showed the struggles of young Herbert Pennywise in his search for a vacation was well received by a most appreciative audience. Fred Pease, '46, directed the play, and Joan Bull, '45, was stage manager. ## THE TELESCOPE

Classical High School is fortunate in having a regular observatory with revolving dome on the roof of the building. Here is housed a six inch aperture refracting telescope which is about six feet in length and is equatorially mounted. The lens was ground by Alvan Clark, famous maker of the great glass for the Lick telescope.

The telescope is used by astronomy students on clear nights. They gather to observe various phases of the moon when the craters, seas, and mountain ranges may be studied. This spring in the early evenings the crescent phase of Venus has been especially interesting and Jupiter and Saturn have been observed. Some years ago the polar cap of the planet Mars was detected at a favorable opposition by an observer at the telescope. Sunspots have been projected, counted, and studied.

THE SCIENCE DEPARTMENT

In the astronomy work pupils become familiar with the solar system, the motions of the heavenly bodies, and some of the physical laws of the universe. They use terrestrial and celestial globes, a skeleton sphere, a revolving model of the seasons, maps, and charts to aid in clarifying their discussions and observations.

Students of meteorology make daily observations at their weather station. They read the hygrometer, barometer, thermometer, sling psychrometer, and interpret cloud and sky conditions. They make recordings of these observations which are placed on a station model. This is then compared with the official United States weather map and a forecast for the next day is made.

IN THE PHYSIOGRAPHY LABORATORY

Relief and contour models are part of the working equipment in the study of physiography. Rivers and valleys, plains and plateaus, deserts and mountains, volcanoes and glaciers become familiar. Since the Connecticut Valley furnishes a wealth of geological history, local conditions, rock, glacial, and river formations are included in the study. Topographical maps illustrating the various earth conditions in the entire country are studied in detail. On maps of the Connecticut Valley students locate formations of drumlins, kettle holes, ox bows, water gaps, terraces, dinosaur tracks, and post glacial lakes.

TEAMWORK IN THE CHEMICAL LABORATORY

The picture at the right shows a group of chemistry students preparing and investigating the properties of the element oxygen. This is one of many experiments and demonstrations performed in chemistry to illustrate fundamental principles and applications. We live in a world of chemical changes. An elementary knowledge of this subject is therefore important for an understanding of the chemical ideas one must constantly meet. The oft heard radio commercial "Better Things for Better Living Through Chemistry" has a real import.

PARTNER IN THE PHYSICS LABORATORY

The boys shown in the picture at the left are verifying a very important principle of physics which has to do with the loss of weight of submerged bodies. Such a principle applies to the design and operation of submarines. Besides these individual laboratory experiments, pupils are shown lecture table demonstrations, and pictures on the screen. Physics is the basic science for many professions and industries. Girls and boys study Heat, Light, Sound, Mechanics, and Electricity. Pupils who have taken this work should have a better understanding of the marvelous world of Science about them and because of this live richer, broader lives.

THE SCIENCE DEPARTMENT

The physiology course at Classical is open to girls in the eleventh and twelfth grades who have successfully completed a year's work in biology. The chief aim of the course is to provide an understanding and develop an appreciation of the structure and functions of the human body and their relationship to hygienic living and physical well-being. The course is designed to furnish a valuable background for girls who plan to enter the fields of nursing, medicine, laboratory technique, social service, and home-making. The girls in the picture are examining a full size model of the human body.

This picture illustrates one of the many activities which are a part of the instruction in biology. The course is open to everyone in Classical High School. Pupils who take it are given a survey of plants and animals that should foster a greater appreciation of life in its many forms. They should be impressed with the importance of conserving our natural resources. Pupils gain a general idea of the structure and normal functioning of the human body which should lead to wise personal health habits and intelligent attitudes toward public health measures.

THE IMPORTANCE OF LATIN

Any pupil who has studied Latin for two years or more knows that from such study he has gained decidedly in the following ways:

1. Knowledge of the meaning and the spelling of English words, more than half of which come directly or indirectly from Latin words.
2. Knowledge of the grammatical structure of a language, as you can't get very far in Latin without knowing just how each word is used in a sentence.
3. Ability in the study of French, Spanish, Italian, and Portuguese (about nine tenths of the words in these languages come from Latin.)
4. Understanding the meaning of Latin words and expressions found in literature, medicine, science, law and elsewhere.
5. Knowledge of Roman myths, legends, customs, and history, and appreciation of references to them found so often in general reading.
6. Understanding of social, economic, legal and political problems that are always occurring in the life of a nation.
7. Formation of habits of thoroughness, accuracy, perseverance and reasoning.
8. Acquisition of a key to the treasure house of a great literature.

Freedom of Education

After victory, the four freedoms have been promised to everyone in the Axis countries as well as in the United Nations. In order to insure the perpetuation of these ideals, there is need of a fifth one . . . Freedom of Education. Under the heel of the Nazi regime, young Germans were taught only what the State deemed necessary for their distorted education. In a totalitarian land, a child has no thoughts of his own because he is not trained to think for himself, but is instructed to know only the warped ideas of his teachers, who in turn must use only the textbooks approved by the higher leaders. In Germany, children have been subjected to three main ideas: unquestioning obedience to superiors, the glory of war, and intense hatred for all except the "pure Aryan". If we want to have a lasting peace, these youngsters must learn to do their own thinking, so that they may recognize another Hitler; they must see the wasteful folly and misery of battle and must learn the value of peaceful arbitration; and they must be taught tolerance of all peoples on earth. To have tolerance, we must have knowledge, for we are intolerable only of what we fear, and fear comes from ignorance. Tyranny, dictatorship, and suppression of the rights of life, must be forever trampled from their thoughts. This cannot be put aside for long, but should be begun as soon as victory is ours. If we do not start to educate these children immediately, twenty-five years from now Germany will be fertile ground for the sowing of new seeds of Naziism. Into the minds of those boys and girls now being liberated in Europe must be instilled the rights to their freedom of education. In the minds of older people, there is too much hatred and fear of former leaders, but the fresh unmolded thoughts of a child are open to both right and wrong. Since we have the opportunity of directing them into the proper course, it is our duty as a civilized nation to teach these children why the democratic way is a better way to live. We can open the minds of all the people and forever free them from the chaotic abyss of misery caused by ignorance, only if the Light of Education radiates hope to every heart.

LINCOLN REED SANDERSON

Lincoln Sanderson, son of Dr. and Mrs. Paul G. Sanderson of Longmeadow, was a member of the class of 1945 until his death October 29, 1943. Known as "Linc" to his many friends, he possessed a keen school spirit. His love for athletics, especially football, was outstanding. He was an excellent tennis player and enjoyed all sports. Linc knew the history and records of baseball and football many years back. Whenever a disagreement arose concerning these sports, whether it be a ruling or a matter of record, Linc's decision on the matter was always accepted as final and correct.

Though physically unable to compete on the football field, he wanted to be as near to the team as possible, so he became a manager. As manager Linc won more than a letter. He won the admiration and respect of the team, fans and coach. Manager is a difficult job, for it requires keeping track of all equipment, taking attendance at practice, carrying water to the players during time-outs, and countless other tedious, but important tasks. Linc was fully equal to his job and proved himself to be a tireless and reliable worker. He was a friend of every player and the first on the field whenever one was injured.

Three days after Lincoln's death Classical upset a powerful Trade team which was the players' way of showing their devotion to their departed manager. From this they went on to win the Little Three Championship as further tribute to him.

The Class of 1945 will remember Linc as a boy whose infectious spirit caught on wherever he went. They will remember him as the friendly manager, always smiling, always helping the players or coach. Above all they will remember him as the fine gentleman that he was.

FLORENCE W. BUZZELL

In every occupation there are those who do their tasks and do them well. Sometimes one finds a person who not only performs his duties efficiently and honestly but goes out of his way to accomplish more than what is required. It has been the good fortune of Classical's students during the past twenty-four years to have in Mrs. Florence Buzzell, a woman who has not only aided them in their health problems but has also given them counsel when personal troubles loomed large.

For twenty-four years students at Classical have found their way to a small room on the second floor where they could set forth their innermost problems. They came away from conferences walking with a bit more assurance having learned that usually everything can be straightened out. Seated at her desk piled high with the correspondence of her pupil friends of past years, Mrs. Florence Buzzell has watched thousands of students enter and leave the small office known as "Buzzy's."

Behind the translucent glass of that door marked 210, one could see in former years members of the Welfare Board busily engaged in preparing baskets for the needy at Christmas or Thanksgiving or discussing plans for raising money for the wants of some more unfortunate pupil. Originally composed of boys only, the Welfare Board was formed in 1924. Later girls were eligible for membership. For many years the Welfare Board under Mrs. Buzzell's supervision served the school faithfully. Among its accomplishments was the securing of employment for students, both full time jobs and part time, especially at Christmas. "Penny Days," flower sales and teas were conducted by the Board as a part of its activities. With the money gathered from these affairs, medical, dental, and optical care was secured for those financially unable to obtain it. The greater part of the fund was used for lunches, carfare, and clothing for needy pupils. Mrs. Buzzell's name will always be associated with the Welfare Board, an organization which served its purpose and brought joy and good health to deserving people.

More than one of "her" boys, as she likes to speak of them, will receive an unexpected package this Christmas from her. "I am going to send gifts to some of the boys overseas who might be forgotten by other friends," she stated recently. Every day the pile of V-Mail, Air Mail, and other letters bearing foreign postmarks grows larger on her desk, attesting the esteem with which her boys regard her. They are always assured of a prompt reply from Buzzy.

Those who come in contact with her are always impressed by her sense of humor. When a group has gathered in her tiny office, there is often the sound of merry laughter brought about by some anecdote of which she seems to have an endless number. Her life has been a ceaseless attempt to brighten the lives of others. She often finds time to visit sick pupils and never fails to cheer them.

A lover of dogs, and, we hear, an excellent cook, she also enjoys a game of contract. She is particularly fond of motor trips and likes the out-of-doors.

In November, when Buzzy left our school, she went with the certain and satisfying knowledge that her twenty-four years of service for others would not be forgotten by them. Wherever Buzzy may be, her many friends will seek her out.

The History of the Class of 1945

The Haven<sup>1</sup>
By Co.<sup>2</sup>

Once upon a morning dreary<sup>3</sup>, while I wandered,
meek and feary,
Through many a quaint and curious hall reechoing of last year's lore—
While I plodded, nearly sprawling, suddenly there came a bawling
As of some one loudly falling, falling at his homeroom door.
'Twas some other freshman falling, falling at his
homeroom door;
Only this and nothing more.

Ah, distinctly I remember it was in the month,
September,
And each separate, sighing member wrought his name upon the score<sup>4</sup>.
Eagerly I wished the morrow;—vainly I had sought to borrow
From my books surcease of sorrow—sorrow for the ocean shore—
For the song of salty waters breaking on the shining shore:
Summer gone for evermore.

And the teacher was beseeching of each cringing,
cowarding creature,
"No one has the right to do that which, if everyone
did it, would destroy society,"
So that now to still the beating of my heart I stood repeating,
"No one has the right to do that which, if everyone
did it, would destroy society,"
'Till some student came entreating entrance at the
homeroom door,
Probably another bore.

Then elections were appearing, long I pondered,
wondering, fearing,
Doubting, dreaming dreams no mortals ever dared to dream so long;
But the tension was unbroken, and the murmurs gave no token,
'Till the only word there spoken was the whispered word, "Armstrong!"<sup>5</sup>
This I whispered, and an echo murmured back, "Can't be wrong!"
Merely this and then, "So long."

Presently my soul grew stronger; hesitating then no longer,
"Sir," said I, "your most respected presence I do now
implore;
To give a dance is the intent of G.A.A.—a big event.
Let's go tripping, skipping, dipping on the gay gymnasium floor."
So we went and had a G.A.A.<sup>6</sup> time when we opened wide the door.
Oh, forgotten—nevermore.

Back into the homeroom turning, all my soul within me burning,
Soon again I heard a calling, somewhat louder than before.
"Surely," said I, "surely that is something at my
homeroom door;
Let me see, then, what thereat is, and this mystery
explore;
Let my heart be still a moment and this mystery
explore:
'Tis rationing and nothing more."

Since scarlet fever stopped the sing; no one heard our<sup>7</sup> carols ring.
With "Hymn of Praise" and "The New Earth"<sup>8</sup> the Glee Club gained a hand well worth.
Our voices rose from floor to floor—
Heart felt warmth—nothing more.

Then new elections made us long for renewed leadership with Armstrong.<sup>9</sup> Our advisors Lewis, Corbin, Crane<sup>10</sup> directed our steps towards the true lane—
"The true lane of scholarship, character, and honor"<sup>11</sup>
Quoth our counsels evermore.

Some earnest players from our throng revived a club asleep so long;
"Thespians" received its first outcry, "Bravo," for the cast of bright "Girl-Shy."
For we cannot help agreeing that no living human being
Ever yet was blessed with class so far above before—

The Prophecy of the Class of 1945

Gaunt and weary from our long pilgrimage, with a seven-day growth of beard (on the boys), the Prophecy Committee gathers in the School Office at Spring Street. We walk with an air of disdain on the $1200 rug that caused so much emotion back in 1944, and the precocious Kivi (still precocious at 37) dares to put his feet on the Governor Winthrop desk. "So what?" he says, as D. A. R. Dottie reprimands him. "Winthrop's been dead hundreds of years — I'm not."

We are met to talk over one of the most serious calamities of 1965 — the mysterious disappearance of Classical High School. Instead of the familiar spotted yellow-brick walls, there is only a gaping hole. "Dreadful! Horrifying! Tut!" It all started months ago when Margie rushed into the sanctuary of the Elite Club, panting "It's gone! It's gone! What'll we do?" On the last few words her voice rose to such a pitch that the automatic sprinkler system thought it was a flying human. Clinging to his cloak was Herbie Aronson, resplendent in a sky blue-plink blow-tie. The two of them excitedly announced that they were going to try to find the lost Classical, and did we want to help? DID WE!! no- Poor Stuporman. When he heard this, he scratched his head, picked himself up and said, "Well, I'll do it myself then." At Marcia's suggestion, Herbie pulled his crystal ball out of his hip-pocket and conjured up the Police Station. The doleful strains of the "Prisoners' Song" (We're the Mighty Meums) filled the room as the chain-gang staggered into sight. Frank Sternberg (faint as usual) was followed by Tom McSweeney, who had been imprisoned for polygamy, and Tad Fischer who had been detained for illegal selling of aspirin and coke under the new Narcotic Law sponsored by The Rev. Mr. Roger Barnett. Herbie turned the dial of his crystal ball and whistled as McSweeney's harem hove into sight, herded by matron Marjorie Wood. In the next cell was Marilyn Rulnick, taking a post-graduate course in "How to Be a Successful Kleptomaniac" in six easy lessons. Finally the placid features of Don Dupre, chief of police, obliterated the ball, and he connected us with the newly-founded Bureau of Missing Buildings headed by Merle Rice, who is assisted in his operations by his secretary Nancy Larson. Merle reported nothing but a missing doghouse, fully equipped with running Drinkwater.

Sturporman shook his head, picked himself up and flew out of the window with Herbie on his back as the phone rang. It was Mrs. Drewry (the former C. K.) screaming frantically, "My hubby (THE Garth Drewry, Ph.D., LL.D., M.D., B.T.O., S.O.S., C.O.D., I.O.U., R.S.V.P.,) has disappeared! He was working for his L.S.M.F.T. in Physics 73 F at Classical — and now he's disappeared with the school." Now there was no doubt left in our minds — we would have to investigate — so we're off for a trip around the world to look for C.H.S.

We only stopped a moment so that Barbara could phone Marie O'Gara's drug store and cancel Kivi's hourly milk-shakes until further notice. This would give Maria Lovechio, Marie's delivery girl, quite a rest. At the LaLaporte Airport, Bob was overjoyed to find out that our stewardess was going to be charming Gloria Caruso, and our pilot none other than Jean Lyons, first woman to fly for the O'Donnell Air Lines. And so we flew to Tampa, Florida. We arrived there just in time to hear Mary Crapser, renowned world traveler, give a lecture on the "Rhizome Fall of Pneumonomycosis", before the Consolidated Federation of Amalgamated Women's Clubs, Inc., of which Val Johnson is honorable president. We also intercepted a Namroputsogram (Steiger spelled backwards) from fire siren, and turned itself on. While we were drying out, Margie told us of how she was walking down State Street when she came upon Herbie Aronson. Sobbing wildly, he explained that while toying around with magic formulas, he had developed one that made Classical disappear, — and now he couldn't fi-i-in-nd it! Marge left him in care of Ruth Lambert, R.N., and dashed off to inform us of the disaster. "Ooh," moaned Dick. "This is even worse than the day I dropped my gum into my chemistry experiment." "What happened then?" asked Bob. "It formed an affinity for the sulfuric acid, and the last I saw of them, they were walking down State Street, holding hands."

A knock at the window saved him from a horrible fate. It was Ralph "Stuporman" Steiger on the ledge of our eightieth story pent-house club. No, Ralph has not turned out to be a human fly. He is just a Stuporman. While flying north from Springfield, he had seen something that looked like Classical, but it had turned out to be an old condemned sawmill.

On our way to South America, we passed over the Panama Canal, with its new set of blonde locks, especially waved and constructed by Bob Lurie. And what was our amazement when we reached Lima, Peru to find Sheldon Goldberg the topic of conversation. He had been imprisoned for undermining civilian morale by trying to get the natives to raise string beans, and he was now engaged in shelling his 9,874th bushel of lima beans. (His sentence was 10,000). Elfrida Bettes, the American consul, was so glad to see us that she decided to hold an alumni party. As the DAILY LIMA BEAN later reported, "The party was a howling success." Entertainment was provided by the "Tantalizing Trio" — Elinore Daley, Marjorie Bryan and Barbara Murphy, who were in South America on a special tour with Elinore Rollins, assisting artist. Back at our hotel we found a Namroputsogram from Stuporman. While whizzing over the south side of Chicago he thought he had caught a whiff of the Classical lunchroom, but on further inspection he was mistaken. We sent a telegram of condolence and set out on a very dangerous lap of our journey — by super-charged mosquitoes, especially trained by Carlton Cook, over the wild jungles of Brazil. We made it with very few mishaps except when Janet dropped her hankie to a tall, good-looking — who on further inspection proved to be a civilized gorilla. We stopped only for a moment in Manaos to refuel. (Kivi was very thirsty by this time.)

In Rio De Janeiro we decided to do the hot spots. We felt our way into a darkened cabaret, and bumped (literally) into "Rio Rita" Gosselin. A little one-man band and flea circus, led by Jimmy Vernadakiss was giving out with an old favorite, "Tico-Tico", and the chorus line, Beverly Young, Shirley Verdun and Norma Barez, was sambaing to its strains. After the entertainment, we sped through the streets to our hotel in a cab owned by the Hubbard Cab Company and driven by June Goodyear, who proudly demonstrated her own invention, a shock-absorbing tire with a bustle. But no one had seen Classical.

While flying from Natal to Dakar, in an auto-giro manufactured by Leon Buker and Daughters, we spied Carolyn Hagman on a lush tropical island, eating bananas with Thurman Pava whose plane had just crashed in a nearby palm tree. And a few leagues on, we saw a truly remarkable sight — an oblong island, inhabited solely by aboriginal natives — including Dick McMahon and Doug Cummings. We dropped in out of curiosity, and the two fellows, apparently on the best of terms, explained that they were sworn enemies and were plotting against each other for control of the island. Since 1950 Dick had won the yearly election seven times against Doug's eight wins.

They were now whiling away the time playing tiddly-winks until the election returns came in. We decided not to wait for the probable bloodshed, but as we flew away, Dick came down to the water's edge and screamed "I made it!" Doug was there too, pumping his hand up and down with true sportsmanship. Another civil war averted.

In Dakar we explored some curiosity shops, and there we found Paul Joseph trying to sell Pat Stebbins a genuine Moravian curiosity, "Lion" Leo Theriault. Back at the hotel we were greeted by another Namroputsogram.

After seeing Chicago, Herb and I whirled around, picked ourselves up and headed for Florida. In no time at all plus 15 we were over the dark and dreary Neverglades. Suddenly in front of me I saw a horrible sight! It was a face! But what a face! — and — it — was — UPSIDE-DOWN. Then I released a sigh of relief. It was just Herbie looking over my shoulders. He was staring at something in the slimy mud. It looked like an old log or alligator, but it was only Leonard "Yawn" Levine, still looking for Shangri-La. With him in a small rowboat was the famous Russian professor, Stanlioff Chizitsky, looking for a species of snail called Morbidsen Souhumor which he believes causes fallen arches. I'll keep looking.

From Dakar we hopped the 10:25 safari bound for Cairo, led by an able guide, Doug Habel. We made it in 12 hours on his jet-propelled camels, but we nearly lost Dick at the Pialett coaling station, manned by Caroline Rowlett and Beth Piatt, who are living in seclusion until Ollie Patrell gets out of the Navy. It is rumored that Louise Cowles is going to join them to make it Copialett. Prompted by the strains of the song, we all halted at Trinidad for a glass of rum and coco-cola at Duffy's Drive-in. We had to tip Mary Duquette, Drive-in Dilly, an extra nickel because of the trouble she had reaching the glasses up to Marge and Janet who refused to dismount.

Once in Cairo we hastened to the ancient stone marvels and bumped into a tourist party — Dave Levi was showing Edwina Dorgan and Joanne Stonerod the Sphinx. Dorae Elwell was there, too, and absolutely refused to move; she was positive it winked at her! We found Doris Brown, weak from lack of coke, wandering about the many passages in Khufu's tomb. On our way back to the hotel we stopped for tea in "Sloppy Joe Dietz's" and were waited on by Shirley Cartmill, hash slinger par excellence. We also bought a paper from Milton Savos, editor of the CAIRO CRISIS, and learned that an anti-tobacco league had just been formed, with Art Hagen as president and Eleanor Clark as secretary. We also read a D.P. (Disunited Press) scoop by Dick Grant, roving reporter. He had just uncovered a secret diary unfolding the lives and loves of Bill Hendron, the 111rd, Esquire.

The next morning we set out for Athens to see the famed Acropolis. It was truly a beautiful sight, and we were reminded of the glory of Greece by our guide, Angelo Kasemeotes. He and seventeen little Angelos and one little Angela are the official care-takers of the Parthenon. We signed the register and looking through it found many familiar names — Arie Ann Kempton, now a renowned toe dancer (as opposed to George Morgan, who dances on other peoples' toes,) Sara Pease, first woman president of Patagonia and Fred Torrey, recently knighted to the order of the Red Flannels.

From Athens we took ship to Bombay. The captain was Seamon Solomon, 2nd class, and Chief stewardess was Elaine Seguin. Several of our friends were on board — among them Joan Boedeker and her famous horse "Landcracker", great-great grandson of Sea-Biscuit, Margaret Sullivan, writer of children's fairy tales and Betsy Gilbert, the female Ely Culbertson. At Bombay we were greeted by the British resident, Mike Savage, who insisted on taking us to the Bombay Soap Opera House to hear a performance of "Brahmaputra Blues", recently composed by Phyllis Hatch. The leading roles were charmingly rendered by Betty-Ann Beck and Bill Taft. While wandering through the teeming streets of the city, we stumbled on Morton (Moham) Levine, the Indian faker. Staring open-mouthed as he made Nancy's Wrinkles appear and disappear were Marjory Whitesman and Shirley Sarna, globe-trotters. Stuporman contacted us again.

STUPORMAN

We passed Miami today, and in the distance saw a beautiful modern building. At once I knew it wasn't Classical, but we flew down to look around. It was FUN (Florida University of Nothing). Here were gathered the geniuses of the world, working on all kinds of scientific projects. There were several old acquaintances; Morgan Levine had just developed a bar of Ivory Soap that was 99 45/100% pure, yet it wouldn't float. Janet Miller was working on a survey of people who had actually walked a mile for a Camel. Jim Eisenstock had written books in Spanish, French, German, Hungarian, Chinese, Scotch and Soda. Edward Faneuf was trying to interest people in new methods of education. He says, "If a pupil doesn't want to take a test, don't make him — just give him an A for being aggressive." George Sullivan was spending most of his time in just living. William Mufatti spends most of his time studying figures. Once in a while, he also studies a little Math.

From India we traveled to Tibet via elephants. Bill had trouble with his mount because his long black beard kept tickling the poor animal's sensitive ears. We were making the hazardous journey solely to visit Glenn Gray who had become a monk in order to meditate upon his past sins. He was very proud of his modern monastery and invited us to the evening entertainment, a movie starring Bunny Barrows and Mickey Mouse. Also at the monastery but not present at the movie was Harry Harrison, mad philosopher. He greeted Kivi and Marge with howls of joy and read us all his latest thesis on the "Immutability of the Character of June Greenfield."

We escaped from Tibet into the land of smiling faces — China. In a remote province we met "Andy" Anderson, a missionary, teaching the little heathens of the differences between Immanuel Kant (No one has the right, etc.) and Confucious. She has made a remarkable amount of conversions. Beauty expert Elaine Latow was with her, keeping Andy as fresh and pretty as when she was voted Miss Classical of 1945. Once in Hong Kong we were thrown into a gay society crowd and were entertained regally by the wife of the American ambassador, the former Barbara Falconer. She and Marcia were inseparable during our stay, and it was a familiar sight to see the two of them in a custom-built rickshaw, doing the town. We were lucky enough to get a back copy of the Springfield DAILY NEWS with the slate of the 1965 schoolboard including Onie Foote, Rhoda Friedlander and Norma-Jean Knight. There was also a news story on General Russell Smith whose army had recently returned from an attempt to defrost the frozen wastes of Antarctica with a new type of blowtorch perfected by Earl Williams. But not a word about C.H.S.

From Hong Kong we caught a Moscow-bound stratoliner. We were traveling with Gurson Kantor, silver-tongued orator and his secretary, Martin Silverman, Miriam Goldstein, now a Powers model, was temporary stewardess, a publicity stunt engineered by Arnold Smith, agent for the Zahaykevitz Zipper Company. They were just completing a test to show that Zahaykevitz Zippers zipped in any country or climate. The television set proved very popular, especially during the Dot Bell (voice with a sigh) telephone hour, when we enjoyed a violin concerto in H minor played by Don Young, and a short dramatic skit featuring Mary Alice Fitzgerald, who had finally graduated from property gal. Joan Bull was emcee and announcer.

At Moscow we all rushed out of the plane (except for Miriam, whose zipper was stuck) and made a whirling tour of the city. We gazed wide-eyed at the Kremlin, the Red Square and the latest Vaudeville Act at the "Kozy Kopeck", managed by Saul Bloch and Charles Hoff who had emigrated in 1946. The show starred Doug Smith, fire eater and his assistant Frances Schekman who can juggle five pie-plates while conjugating "fero, ferre, tuli, latus." Saul took us to a meeting of the "Intellectual Four" of which he is dishonorable secretary. Howard Leavitt is President and Sanford Linetsky and Adelaide Posnick, first and second vice-presidents respectively. We also took time off to visit Phyllis Berkwitz, scientist, who in her experimentation had developed the ultimate — dehydrated water. Dave Brown, her lab assistant, proudly showed us his latest invention, a new apple-polishing fluid. We were relieved to hear from civilization with a Namroputsogram from Stuporman —

Well I went through the factory district — no Classical. All we found was a broken orange box, but anyone can make a mistake. Joyce Hayes is the local political machine. She's busy getting votes for Mary "Honest John" Miller. Dr. Joyce's gang consists of Wild Don Heacock, Cathy "Trigger" Tehan and "Nitric Acid" Peckham. On a wall was a large picture of Peggy Roche that said "wanted". I wonder — Mike Marchese was standing before the picture in a very dreamy state, while Ginger Feltham, hair piled high, was scrubbing the floor. George Graham was wandering around in a gutter, looking, said he, for the missing link. Yes, his cuff was dragging. Well I heard a rumor about something floating up the Mississippi, so I'm off. (But def).

As a change from flying we decided to walk from Titsky, Russia to Totsky, Poland. It is a very backward region inhabited by Mary Cramer, with natives still using electric light instead of the new opulescent light designed by Dick Armstrong, master electrician at Eastinghouse. When we plodded into Totsky, the first thing to meet our eyes was a huge neon sign — "Mama Bean's Boarding House." This must be that rest haven occupied solely by Classical alumni! Mama Bean was very glad to see us and took us on a tour of the house. Jane Lee and Ruthie Howard share a room on the ground floor with 37 cats. They are old maids purely out of choice, because Bob Johnson and Bob LaHotan, who live across the hall, have asked the girls to marry them repeatedly. We witnessed three proposals while walking down the hall. Phil McKenna, the elevator boy, took us to the second floor, the abode of the RECORDER staff faithfuls. Corky Cooper and Tad Spencer, now editors-in-chief, were dictating to Pat Coontz and Mildred Katz, while executive Adele Foster received the copy as it came off the typewriter. She fed it to a chute leading to the cellar where Joan Small and Phyllis Testa run the presses. Tad showed us the latest edition with glee — Blood-red headlines screamed:

CLASSICAL HIGH DISAPPEARS

Stuporman Leads Search

Garth Drewry Missing

Featured with this was a story of our world tour with a big map showing our route. Corky showed us the roster of reporters in every large city on the globe. Mary Jean Layman with a large staff of reporters covers South America, and Helen Papaioanou manages Africa. We had missed her on our visit because she was in Capetown attending the premiere of "Flagellatin' Flossie" with Bill Landen as "Flagellate" and Barbara Bridgeman as "Flossie". Marjorie Sterling, Helen's assistant, had whizzed the news of our travels to Tad and Corky. While we were there, a Namroputsogram came over the teletype —

Dear Folks

We investigated that Mississippi rumor, but it was only a chicken-coop stuck on a sandbar — a left-over from the last flood. We dropped in to see Mrs. Ippi anyhow, and found Doris Avery cooking for her, while Ken Raffol fed the fire. We didn't help them because we'd already done our good deed for the day — helping "Dot" Murray operate her sunshine factory. We're off to the wooly west.

Love,

Stupe

The next floor was the dangerous ward for those alumni who had cracked under the strain of Math 4, Ancient History, Special English, Physics and Glee Club. Nurse Pat Madden led us into the presence of Jane Ward who could only stare straight ahead muttering "And the glory that was Greece". Nearby in a padded cell lay Jean Carter, broken under the strain of discovering a fifth conjugation. Her next-door neighbor, naughty little Alden Hay, could always throw her into a frenzy by saying "Amo, amas, amat!" Gloria McElderry was in the next cell, — but how strange she looked! Her feet were peeping over her shoulders, and one hand wagged coyly from her head, while the other was hidden in a maze of limbs. Nan nette Bartlett sadly explained that Acrobatic Gloria had tried once too often to imitate a pretzel. Nannette herself had been exiled to Mama Bean's because of the devastating power of her hypnotic gaze. At the very end of the corridor was an immense library occupied by Joe Apelbaum who has been struck dumb because he had used up his quota of 56 billion words. Silence is golden, Joe! — even tho' your hair is touched with silver.

On the very top floor we found Irving S. Chidsey, Jr. quite mad. He recognized us, and favored us with a smile and a peep at his latest invention — a slide rule that adds and subtracts. Norma Beaudry, his keeper, explained that Mama Bean is quite fond of Irv's little devices and has them installed all over the house. At that moment a bugle sounded mess. Rushing downstairs we found it was Betty Carter, announcing dinner. All the boarders came prancing in, equipped with bib, tucker and Irv's combination knife, fork, spoon and safety razor. It was to be an extra special dinner because we were guests. First came Alice Bohanon with the entree. There were two choices — fruit cocktail and Connelly special — sardines, artichokes, mussels, kohlrabi, and gingerbread. When we finished this, Jean Manning brought on the main course — spaghetti a la Maloney. During the pause while we eliminated it, Jay Baughman and his Frowsy Four played (?) music (?). Claire Wholean on the washboard proved diverting as did Phyllis Rowe on the bellows, not to mention Barbara Raymond and her comb. Dessert was a special concoction dreamed up by Shirley Morse and Margie Mackie — in fact it was indescribable. Donald Ely, vintage 1945, brought out some dusty bottles of Moxie and Seven-Up for us to imbibe. At 10:00 Mama Bean padded about, locked all the doors and windows and checked her Little Black Book. It seemed that all her wards were in and under control except Sven Eliason. At length, however, a very abashed Sven knocked on the front door and was dubiously admitted to explain his delinquency. Blushing fiercely, he told us that he and Phyllis Dagnault had gone up to Sweden for a picnic and Chuck Ryder had given him a ticket for parking his Ford V-8 in a cloud bank. Mama considered this enough of an excuse so at 11:30 we all trotted off to bed.

Next morning reveille sounded off at 7:00, and not accustomed to such stringent discipline, we all had to be routed out of our beds by Francis Connors, corridor cop. After breakfast, we bade a tearful farewell to all the inmates and set off for Berlin. We were rowed across the Oder River by Dick Wiley who maintains a small ferry station. Berlin had been rebuilt following the Great War of our youth, but it is several yards lower than the surrounding landscape because of all the bomb craters — sort of a sunken garden effect. The fellows were very anxious to see the beer-gardens and Max Anetzberger, Ace of the War, who brought down 86 planes before crafty Susan Von Keith lassoed him and took him as a souvenir. He's now living in the German Museum of Fine Warts. He told us not to miss the news about Classicalites in the "Deutschland Drivel", an underground newspaper started by Florence Fagioli during the war and carried on for sentiment's sake. We found her in a cellar, furtively printing the latest issue from a pre-war hand-press that smacked of scandal, propaganda, and printer's ink. The front page had a large picture of Betty Larson, arsonist. She is regarded as something of an international heroine for burning up all the funny books in the world, because they are detrimental to a child's mind. Bob chuckled as he pulled out the latest issue of "Corpuscule Curdling Comics", published monthly by Lee Bachelder. Of course Bob isn't a child, and besides he has no mind to detriment. We heard more news from Stuporman —

HERBIE

While flying over the Canadian Rockies I spied an interesting sight — it was a deluxe logging-camp, run by Gloria Nassif. Under her direction, lumberjills Shirley Anderson and Virginia Brogan were sawing down a young Sequoia. Caroline Hobbs was interviewing them for the "Daily Shirker". It seems that they have been on the job for 3 years and seven days and deserve some recognition. Marilyn Logan was shouting "Mess" when Andree Frizzell rushed into the clearing, pursuing a big furry animal. Gloria raised her trusty peashooter and slew it — but on further examination it proved to be Ted Hoffman in his bear-rug. Horrified at such wanton blood-shed, Herb and I hastened away.

Stupe Dottie began to tire of liverwurst and pumpernickel so we headed towards Switzerland and Kingsbury Kastle; playground of the Alps. This haven of rest and loveliness is run by Shirley Kingsbury, sports-woman pro tem. The huge log building was delightful until Shirley showed us the accident ward. This was the answer to the fragments of wood littered about the place. Marcia Fieldstein and Phyllis Gloth lay side by side in twin beds looking very pathetic. Between them they had 3 broken legs, 3 wrenched collar-bones, a dislocated hip and 5 broken arms. Nurse Cloe Riani shook her head and sighed — "They tried the ski jump at the Battered Horn on the same pair of skis." While we were sympathizing, a litter bearing the limp form of Carol Shaw was brought in. She was the victim of a curious Alpine sickness "Snofunn." Upset by this, we fled back to the fireplace, and Dick and Barbara firmly declined to go skiing. At this moment Betty Hamilton came striding in with the remnants of a mountain-climbing party — Ruth Katz and Shirley Mason. It had been another disaster — the inert forms of Louise Crocker and Myrtle Desmond could be seen in the snow on far off Pickled Peak. Shirley grinned and sent Norma Boyea in a junior jeep to bring em back alive. Phil Desilets was hanging on with a thermos bottle of hot tea. This was too much for us and we left, with a suggestion that the place be renamed "Calamity Castle". As we drove off we met Eileen Aldrich and Patricia Gorman going to the rest-haven for a scintillating vacation, but they could not be dissuaded. Farewell to the Alps! We are off to Gay Paree with all its sights.

The first sight to meet our eyes was amazing. The Eiffel Tower was surrounded by hordes of people — and there, at the very top, was Carolyn Bartlett painting it cerulean pink. Sallie Alpert and Ruth Jernberg, her helper, were gravely handing her pails of paint with which Carolyn was covering the entire structure. We were afraid she'd fall, but Sallie told us she was held by a girder-belt. We drove down the Champs Elysees, staring open-mouthed at modish shops and famous statues. Janet was driving, and against our better judgment, made a V-turn to take another look at that adorable hat in "Woodard's Wardrobe Whatnots" and a gendarme came whizzing out on a 3-wheeled scooter. He greeted us with a torrent of French, ending with "I haven't seen you kids since graduation" — it was Francis "Ragout" Hassion. He gave us a personal escort to "Rivechin's Rendezvous", an elite hotel with satin-covered ash-tray and cutglass inkwells. Evelyn had a Namroputso-gram for us —

From Ubendedogundcatsky near Niepepetuisky, which is ten miles from Heilderfuresky which is adjacent to Pleasantville.

Dear Folks,

I haven't written as I haven't learned to White Russian yet.

Yours truly,
Stupormansky

Bellegirl Alyce Grady showed us to our rooms and informed us that good food and entertainment would be found at Cody's Cafe, just around the corner. The girls decided to go shopping and the boys wandered off in search of something more enlightening (!) Helen Bride's Boudoir Shop was our first stop. We flew into ecstasies over the frilly rolling-pins. Dot bought a dozen for her hope chest (she's still hoping) from Beverly Felper. We spent the rest of the afternoon at a fashion show which was greatly enhanced by the three sophisticated models, Sylvia Rubin and Mary Lou Stocker. The latter was especially charming in Charlotte Bushong's latest creation — a chinchilla bathing-suit with ear-muffs to match. Marion Fraska proved to be a sensation in Marilyn Livingstone's sports outfit "Weedy Tweeds". That night we went to Cody's Cafe to see Cecilia Olszewski do her modern interpretive dancing. Carol Hall supplied the interpretative singing.

We were still looking for Classical however, and we found a part of it in the Bastille. The detention-room has transmigrated, and Hazel Champlin has been appointed Keeper of the Keys. Barbara Slavin was in solitary for singing and dancing in the halls the day she was happy. At a little cafe just around the corner from the Sourbonne was Fred Kay, replete with artist's smock and bevy of beautiful girls. Posing for his "Girl Holding Geranium Leaf" masterpiece, was Mary Landers. Fred "Heinreid" Kay is the latest Parisian salon idle.

But Janet and Marge were anxious to get to Holland to see their relations. We passed over Belgium and saw a huge straw hat, camouflaging Elizabeth Kaps and her capacious farm. She cultivates three square feet — one besides her own. In Holland our first stop was the renowned Rubin Reversible Windmill. It seems that Merwin had felt sorry for the Hollanders who grew dizzy watching all the windmills go around the same way — so he invented one that reversed the wind and turned the other way. At the Goss Greenhouse for Undernourished Petunias we found Sally-Ann, tired of raising tulips, experimenting with three-lips.

On the boat-train to Dover, the chief inspectress, Jean Manning found a bunch of stowaways — and there we were back in France. While convincing the authorities of our honesty, we came across Wayne Belanger, one of the big-time international salami-smugglers. He was accompanied by his bodyguards, Mary Erickson and Nan Simonson. Outside we met Willis Hough, Wayne's inside man. But Wayne is almost certain he will be acquitted because he has engaged a celebrated criminal lawyer to plead his case for him — the Janice Peabody. Also he has bribed the judge.

Free again, we decided to take no chances on entangling ourselves with the authorities, so we "took it on the lam." We were literally shot to England in Edith Stirton's Stupendous Stratorockets. They work on the same principle as the man in the circus who is shot from a cannon into a net, only Edith's rockets are aimed directly at the Thames estuary. Equipped with diving-suits, alpenstocks, and a two-days ration of coke and donuts, we were shot. It worked. Within five minutes, we were strolling into Trafalgar Square. Peeking around the famous statue was Estelle Chase. It is her duty to water the century plant every time it blooms, at five dollars a head. In her spare-time, she is keeping track of Halley's comet. Dazed, we made our way to the Old Lady of Threadneedle Street. Doris Hatcher was looking very well. We found her standing without the building taking notes on its architecture for a replica to be built in her Museum of Medieval Monstrosities. Dorothy Horner was handing her pencils as fast as she broke them. Since no one can visit England without visiting the royal dwellings, we toured Buckingham palace — with disastrous results. We lost Marcia in the maze, and Janet Heaton, official hedge-clipper, finally located her — making love to a suit of armor. So we bade a tearful farewell to the maze and the armor, and drove north to a crumbling ruin of a castle, operated by Norman Stockhamer. He has made a paying business out of the castle because it is haunted — and not by any ordinary spectres — but by Nancy Walton and Judith Sunn. He figures that as long as a tourist wants to see ghosts, he might as well see pretty ones. Therefore every night at the stroke of 12, Nancy appears on the topmost tower of the castle, clad in ghostly white veils. It really is an ethereal sight, enhanced by clankings of chains and moans, as Judy, candle in hand, mounts the circular staircase within the tower to stand beside her.

On our way south we passed a lovely drive with a big country estate behind low walls, topped with electrified barbed-wire. The gate said "Minott's Mes-tate". Yes, Paul Minot has retired, and is still a bachelor. He welcomed us, looking the part of a country esquire in rough tweeds, boots and a briar. His special pride is his old master's gallery, with a burglar-proof room containing original Vargas. Next to Paul's land is a large home occupied by those women who couldn't bear to see him drop out of circulation. It is run by Helen Raleigh and Alice Mayer.

Then we turned to Devon for some strawberries with clotted cream. Midge "peaches and cream" Leary was there, tastefully attired in a sun-bonnet and a dirndl, clotting the cream. Midge owns a colorful little inn with telephone service. Just as we were leaving, the phone rang — another message from Stuporman.

From Pinskiktk, Russia—

Oh gosh, we just escaped a horrible fate! We were flying low over Russia and a sleighing party thought we were vultures or something. Dick Michel shot at us with his paralyzing gas because Nancy Sullivan and Marjorie Fenton wanted us alive. Bernice Magnuson was in the sleigh bundled in costly sables. Thinking it over, Herbie and I decided that maybe it wouldn't have been such a horrible fate after all — especially as Esther Minott was there. We are discouraged — hurry home and meet us in the school office on State Street.

Stupe and Herb

We wanted to go to Ireland, but we couldn't tarry long because of Stuporman. He gets quite upset when he has to wait — nerves you know. So we hired Pauline Ederly to fly us back across the Atlantic. Her plane was a floating palace — two rooms and a bath, half of which belongs to Lorraine Cohen and Florence Gordon on an 87-year lease, because of the housing shortage. We touched at Labrador where weather expert, Rosemary McDonough, warned us to hurry to escape a high-pressure area moving down from the north-east — it was Bill Hendron again. It is rumored that Rosemary's efficient predictions have saved butterfly-catchers thousands of ruined nets.

* * * * *

Well here we are — back to reality in the school office, still sitting around on the $1200 rug, playing penny ante. "Where's Gloria?" Barbara asks, as she looks at her hand, yawning, and sees a royal straight flush. As she reaches for her checkbook, a cry arises "Yes, where is Gloria?" "Oh, she went to rescue Stuporman and Herbie who are lost in the Old Howard," answers Dick. As he speaks, Herbie, with Stupe under one arm and Gloria under the other, comes hurtling through the window. Gloria lay on the rug where she was dropped, mutely pointing out the window towards State Street while Stuporman picks himself up and starts raving "Escalators! (pant-pant). Coke machines! Chaise Longues! (pant) Soda-fountain! Ottomans!" He collapses as Herbie begins babbling, "Fluorescent lights! (pant) Cigarette machine! Chrome-plated desks! (pant!)" From the floor Stupe gasps "Bowling alleys and swimming pools!" Gloria adds dreamily "Pink marble", and all together they scream "Clean windows — no B.T.O.!" This was too much for us — had they been exploring a millionaire's palace? (Pant). Gently we prodded Herbie who was gravely counting his toes and asked him "Where and What?" Stupe answered for Herbie who had succumbed under the strain of counting to 11 — "Why Classical covers the whole length of State Street hill. With a final burst of strength, Herbie has conjured up the new Classy High!"

THE HISTORY (Continued from page 82)

Then elections reappearing, news of them came to our hearing, Long we sat awondering, fearing, hearing in our hearts
loud drummings,
'Till at last we knew the outcome—"Winner, Douglas Cummings,"<sup>14</sup>
This we shouted cross the floor to anxious ones who wished the score—
Only this and nothing more.

Summer came, and Autumn loomed, "'45" knew it was doomed
To lead the rest of its fair school by example of Kant's Golden Rule.
Christmas neared, and carols passed forth from the lips of Glee Club's cast, Followed<sup>15</sup> fast and followed faster 'till the songs one message bore:
"Good will toward men forevermore.
Forever—evermore."

Then, we thought, the days flew faster, filled us with the joyous master<sup>16</sup>
Of committees, formed daily by the score,
To plan events as dances, wills, and ballots—things in which we never dreamed we'd all take part, before,
'Till our souls with sorrow grieving, remembering that we were leaving,
Clasped our books with love, not done by us before,
And we clung as ne'er before.

Thus we sat engaged in guessing, but no syllable expressing
Plans of the Senior Prom, for us in store.
These plans and more we sat divining, with our heads
at ease reclining,
Dreaming of the Banquet—like no other e'er before,
Though we wish not to insult the classes gone before—
The classes gone before.

"Be these words our sign of parting, class and clan!"
we shrieked upstarting:
"Get thee back into the pattern<sup>17</sup>, and keep your work up evermore.
Leave no black plume<sup>18</sup> as a token of life here thy soul hath spoken,
But leave a record thus unbroken—red, white, and blue<sup>19</sup> upon your score!<sup>20</sup>
Red for character, white is honor, blue as scholarship—
As "'45" is remembered evermore.
Take our words into your heart, but keep our spirit o'er the door!<sup>21</sup>
Quoth our class evermore.

Education for Intra-American Understanding

Through the turbulence of the past four years, young Americans of every race and creed, unified by the common danger, have fought side by side for their country. Yankee, Italian, German, Negro, Chinese, and Jew have advanced unbroken to meet the foe. As in all the crises of our nation's history, her Youth has risen to defend her; its heroic devotion has made our nation invincible in battle. Yet there is a patriotism of peace as well as a heroism of war, and its only opportunity for display is through good citizenship. What is good citizenship? It is the willingness to co-ordinate our own devices and desires with the general interests of society; to co-operate with our neighbors and fellow-citizens in accomplishing every measure which will assure the highest benefit to the community. But squarely across the path to this unity sprawls intolerance. If we are to form an international community, we must surmount this same barrier. Intolerance and prejudice cannot be overcome without mutual understanding at home. Understanding comes with illumination. No child is born intolerant. Prejudices grow and become a part of him as he becomes aware of and shares the hates and prejudices of his elders. The sad fact is that we are being educated for intolerance, for misunderstanding, for hate, and ultimately for war. Why not education for tolerance, understanding, love and peace? It is this sort of education that far-sighted educators like the authors of our own "Springfield Plan" seek to foster. It is part of this "plan" that pupils should be taught to revere and respect their own native traditions, and with the help of teachers investigate the backgrounds and customs of others. They would be shown what each group has contributed to our great nation, and at the same time taught that all are Americans, with equal duties, rights, and privileges. Many Americans have shown themselves able to shake off the hates and prejudices of the Old World, and have united with their fellows in war and peace alike. If all can be made to believe that they are no more and no less Americans than anyone else, that the heritage of each and every people who have called America home is theirs, that all are equal under the laws of the republic, then, and then only, will America present a united front against world intolerance.

The Student Government Keeps Busy

During the past school year the members of the Student Government have been doing varied tasks for their fellow students and school. Not only have we accomplished the usual services of selling bus tickets, running elections, and managing the lost and found, but we have also put a clock in the girls' powder room, repaired the boys' gym facilities, opened the library for the use of history students, extensively investigated into limiting students activities, worked for student control of study halls, and taken charge of the numerous drives at Classical such as: Red Cross, Student Treasury, P.T.S.A., and the collecting of magazines for the nearby servicemen's hospitals. The accompanying pictures give some idea of our various projects.

THE BLUE AND WHITE

The usual group of students gathers at the lost and found in 208. During the year the Student Government handles a tremendous volume of articles.

The two chairmen, Dick McMahon and Garth Drewry, confer in the Student Government room as Nancy Smead (at the bulletin board) and Anne Fox do other work.

THE RECORDER MUST MEET ITS DEADLINE

Published thirteen times yearly, The Classical Recorder is the work of students in the eleventh grade journalism class, senior editors who have taken journalism the preceding year, and members of the student body interested in writing for the school paper. Through constant practice, students learn to write news, editorials, features, headlines, and to proofread and makeup each six-page issue. They type all copy, draw cartoons and sketches, sell advertising, plan ad layout, and handle finances. During the year, they hear editors of Springfield newspapers speak, participate in conferences with representatives from thirty other high school papers in Western Massachusetts, and enter national and regional contests for high school journalists.

DR. HILL HONORED BY HI-Y

The members of Hi-Y this year have in many ways lived up to their purpose — "To create, maintain, and extend throughout school and community, high standards of Christian character." The programs for the Wednesday meetings have been varied, ranging from a demonstration of war gases to a discussion of boy-girl relations with a group of girls from the school. Many speakers from all walks of life have broadened the outlook of the Hi-Y member, enabling him to plan his own life more wisely. The boys of Hi-Y have maintained a column of their own alumni in the Recorder, and the student body remembers the impressive Hi-Y induction held as an assembly last fall, and the annual Hi-Y dance. In the broader aspect of its work, two members ably represented the group at the annual Hi-Y conference held at Melrose last December. This May, the club presented an induction ceremony as its part in the combined Springfield Hi-Y contribution to a World Service Program. Hi-Y rewarded the long service of Doctor Hill, its loyal promoter for many years, at a testimonial banquet this spring, by presenting him with a jeweled Hi-Y pin and a life membership in the club. The club this year has fifty-five active members who have served on one or more service committees during the year.

Education for Peace

Educating for peace sounds like a tremendous task, practically an impossibility. "How can it be done?", we ask as we hunt through musty tomes and wade through the confusion of conglomerate ideas. But when we reduce it to its simplest terms, we find these four objectives:

1. To develop friendliness and good will toward people in other countries,
2. To know foreign neighbors as real peoples.
3. To overcome racial prejudices.
4. To build a growing appreciation of the necessity for international friendship.

How may these objectives be reached? By appealing to the receptive minds of youth, the young minds which have not as yet formed definite opinions and prejudices. Boys and girls enjoy making a detailed study of other peoples. As they become familiar with the customs, religions and geography of other countries, the strangeness of these foreign places dissolves and they are no longer foreign. A study of the problems of other nations breeds sympathetic understanding. An appreciation of accomplishments in the fields of music, art, literature, science and medicine breeds respect and admiration, and ultimately friendship and genuine brotherhood. The task of education for peace, with its lasting and profound effects may be started in schools. Does all this sound familiar to you? It should, because it is exactly what is being done in our own schools under the Springfield Plan!

BASKETBALL

The 1944-45 edition of the Classical basketball team finished the season with 10 wins, and 7 losses. In the city league, Classical was tied with Cathedral for second place.

After trouncing Monson High 58-25, Classical dropped three in a row to Chicopee, Amherst, and Holyoke; and then disposed of Ludlow, 45-28. Losing to Chicopee for the second time, the Bulldogs then racked up their highest scores of the season against Trade, 64-31 and Commerce, 67-22. In the most exciting game of the year, the Bulldogs finally succumbed to a powerful Tech combine in overtime, 46-41. Beating Amherst, 37-35, and losing to Cathedral, Classical then defeated Monson Academy, 47-37, Trade 45-27, and Commerce, 56-32. After being defeated by Tech, 40-36, the Vaughanmen won their last two games against Monson Academy, 39-19, and Cathedral, 29-27.

INTRA-MURAL BASKETBALL CHAMPS

INTRAMURAL BASKETBALL

This year sixteen teams were divided into two leagues called the American and the National Leagues. The American League was composed of teams made up mostly of Seniors. The National League had teams from the lower classes. The "Blackjacks" won the American League championship. In the National League the "Swanky Swishers" easily took the championship by defeating all their opponents. Finally the "Blackjacks" won the school championship by defeating the "Slick Chicks", "Hi-Y", and the "Swanky Swishers" in the playoffs.

SWIMMING

In the second year of the boys' swimming team, the members swam daily at the YMCA in preparation for the Second Annual Western Counties Inter-Scholastic Swim, held in March. Bob Eldert swam the 100-yd. breast stroke, George Graham, the 220-yard crawl, and Ollie Patrell, the 100-yard backstroke. The team placed Fourth in the meet, gaining 6 points in the 150-yard medley relay.

This year Ollie Patrell and George Graham are graduating; therefore it is hoped that more good swimmers will carry Classical's banner to first place in the tradition that these fellows have started.

A good group of enthusiastic girls took hikes with the Outing Club in the fall and spring of the school year. This year Nancy Wallace was president, Clare Piques was Secretary, Dolly Stone was Treasurer and Miss Carter and Mrs. Dayton were advisors. Hikes, some on foot and some on bikes, were taken to the "V" in Forest Park, Wilbraham, Shaker Pine Lake, South Branch, and Breckwood. The successful year was ended with an overnight hike for members.

SWIMMING

Every Thursday this year at 4:00, the Life Saving Class met at the Trinity Pool in Forest Park. The girls enjoyed their recreation while they did a lot of earnest work. They had to learn and practice approaches, carries and strangle holds. Outside of the duckings each victim received, and the chlorine each swimmer got in her eyes, it was a great deal of fun for all concerned.
